

Fall Fashions in Shoes

BY ORVILLE E. VICTOR.

HIGH laced tan shoes will be in favor as soon as the oxfords and pumps are laid aside at the close of summer, and will continue to be worn until the snow falls, and then some, perhaps. This is the general opinion of manufacturers and dealers, big and little.

One curious thing about shoes, or styles, says one dealer, "is that farther west one goes, the more unusual we find the use of the high known as the bulldog toe; while farther east one travels, the fewer seen."

That as it may, the "bulldog" toe is certainly comfortable, and may be found on plenty of shoes designed for fall and winter trade. A nice shoe the market for fall delivery is a flat, with flat heel, made on an English last and designed to take place of another style which seems to have lost its former popularity.

Very handsome tan shoe, with eyelets, is also among the footwear added for the coming season. This is made on an almost straight last, with toe nearly pointed, and a low, flat heel, in striking contrast to the "bulldog" toe and the military heel. A popular season is predicted for this shoe by its manufacturers.

The swing last is disappearing. A nice shoe for afternoon or evening wear is made of patent leather, in dress effect; this shoe has a cloth top and carries seven buttons. It is made on a flat last, with drop toe; it is comfortable to the feet, and is good-looking.

A nice shoe for men is made of fine kid Blucher, with a single sole. For heavy wear, or walking exercises, the same may be obtained with double sole. A wax calf, with single sole and extension heel, is not very handsome, but it is certainly most comfortable, and will stand for a deal of wear.

Patent calf and fine kid laced shoes will be worn a great deal during the coming season by well-dressed men; for a semi-dress shoe a patent leather, with six buttons, will probably be one of the most popular. A patent calf, with cloth top, is also likely to be a favorite. Old-fashioned congress gaiters are on display, too, and it is predicted that many men of middle age and older will welcome their return. These are made in kid and in calf. Fine kid Blucher and Russian calf Blucher, laced shoes, promise good returns; also a nice kid button shoe.

As a rule, both black and tan shoes for fall and winter wear are being made higher than usual; few of them have less than ten eyelets or hooks for the laces. The military heel vies with the low, flat heel for the public favor; they will probably sell about equally, except among younger men who prefer the high heel.

Like most everything else, shoes have followed the fashion so far as the "high cost of living" is concerned, and many standard makes will be a bit higher this fall than they were last autumn.

Like their fathers, boys will wear both black and tan shoes and oxfords throughout the fall. The oxford line for the coming season includes russet calf, black kid, box calf, wax calf and vicci kid.

To a large degree the same materials are to be found in shoes, lace and button. A nice dress shoe for boys and youths will be found in the velour calf button and the patent calf button. The same may be secured in laced style.

Shoppers are irresistibly attracted to the well-lighted thoroughfare. The bulk of night-time trade goes to stores located along a bright avenue of travel. Mr. Merchant, suppose you were a customer instead of a store-owner, wouldn't you trade—other things being equal—where the stores looked most inviting? That is the way the public feels about it, too.

Davis-Shoes

Fashion shows a strong tendency toward lower heels, medium toes and lace styles in footwear for the coming season—this is a welcome innovation to the shoe man, to whom the fitting of a shoe is as important as the wear, for these changes will make it much easier to perfectly fit every foot.

The store of "Davis-Shoes" will offer a newly organized service this season—Mr. Reinsmar, who for twenty years has pleased "Davis customers" will be in charge of the fitting of men and boys, while Mr. Ben Davis, president of the company, will give his personal attention to each sale in the women's and children's department.

Mr. Davis will devote his entire time and capital to the new organization, which means that no detail in the maintaining of the highest standard, quality and service will be overlooked.

To keep the interest in "Davis-Shoes" constantly on edge—there will be toys and souvenirs for boys and girls and occasional novelties for the grown-ups.
